EMPEROR OFFERS TO ACT AS ARBITRATOR

Proposal Is With Object of Put- was the King's refusal, when driving ting End to Differences Between Balkan Allies.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY. MPEROR NICHOLAS with the object of putting an end to the differences which have arisen between the Balkan allies concerning the apportionment of the spoils of the war-differences which have brought them to the very brink of hostilities among themselves—has notified them of his desire to act as arbitrator in all the questions at issue. The offer has been made in such a fashion by the Russian envoys at Belgrade, Sofia, Cettinje and Athens, as to leave the quareling members of the coalition no alternative but to accept, nolens volens, the Czar's proposal.

And the second of the second with a second with the second wit feur, owing either to business reverses or to the desire for an outdoor means of livelihood.

If I call attention to this, it is bedon a most interesting volume of "Reminiscences" of C. W. Stamper, who, for the last five years of King Edward's reign, was in close personal attendance upon him, in the capacity of motor expert. He was not actually the King's chauffeur, that office be-ing invariably held by picked and ing invariably held by picked and specially trained men of the metropolitan police force. But he always sat by the chauffeur's side, and the King, neither at home nor abroad, would consent to ride in an automobile unless his motor expert, C. W. Stamper was heaide the chauffeur of feel yood. Cauthrov exists and healthy and the head will feel yood. bile unless his motor expert, C. W. Stamper, was beside the chauffeur on the driving seat, prepared for every emergency in the way of breakdown, accident, etc. The King would take him with him when paying country house visits in England, or in trips abroad, and, on one occasion, when he paid a state visit to the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and was asked to ride in one of the duke's cars from the railroad station to the house, he insisted on the duke's footman descending from the driving seat beside the chauffeur, and Stamper taking his place.

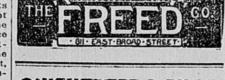

It speaks volumes for the character of King Edward that he should have of king Edward that he should have emerged with the increased good will of his countrymen from the revelations of this personal attendant of his. Of course, there are no state secrets in the volume, but descriptions of many little traits and oddities of the dead monarch which prove him once more to have been a very warm heart. more to-have been a very warm-heart. ed, generous, considerate, but at the same time hot-tempered, impatient, and altogether likeable man, pos-sessed of a gift of picturesque language, especially when angry, and of a keen sense of humor.

One oddity which Stamper relates, Edward VII.'s fondness for practical joking in his younger days—practical joking was at one time a favorite form of amusement at Sandringhamback to Buckingham Palace, to inform Stamper beforehand at which of the several entrances of the royal abode he wished to alight. The King would only notify him just when the motor was going through the palace gates; and if the monarch had any reason to believe that his lords and gentlemen in waiting had assembled to receive him at one entrance, he would make the pure pieasure of seeing them scuttling across the forecourt as fast as they could to meet him. Stamper declares that, to the best of his recollection, the King never alighted at the same entrance to Buckingham Palace twice running. It was his favorite little joke, and one which seemed to afford his never-failing entertainment. declares that, to the best of his recollection, the King never alighted at the same entrance to Buckingham Palace twice running.
